under the gaydar ... from 14

come across me, so I started belting it out in the middle of the street, joined quickly by Barbara and Elizabeth and followed by all the gentlemen who served as our backup dancers and vocalists. It was a wonderful Glee moment that should have been recorded for posterity, but as so much in life the moment passed so quickly. At Lafitte's we had one more drink before deciding to call it a night. But our idea of calling it a night means we went back to JohnPaul's to end our evening of drinking with past Bartender of the Month Bobby. We celebrated Barbara's last ForePlay show until the wee hours of the morning, and then we retreated back to our homes for some beauty rest. Well, I went home, trumpy Barbara went to the Rawhide to talk to a bartender friend of hers (right) and Elizabeth sort of crawled upstairs and fell asleep at JohnPaul's. All and all it was one of my personal best night out's for me.

Saturday came quickly and I met up with Jeff early after he returned home, showered and freshened up. We did a little shopping then off to the Quarter we found ourselves for some late afternoon libations. Chris met us out and we spent a very long time back at Good Friend's under Luke's good cocktail care. That is when we met Houston, a bear sort of guy who followed us around like a puppy dog in heat, He had just ended a relationship and was awfully lonely, so it was our duty as girls about town to help our fellow man in need. So Jeff did him in the bathroom and we were off to the Pub. I'm just kidding Jeff would never let his lips touch someone's privates that had not shown him his last W2 forms for the pass three years. Thank god he has standards. Morals no, but he has standards.

We did the circuit once again of Pub, Oz and Lafitte's then ended back up at JohnPaul's where they were having their country night. I ran into an old friend there who has just recently broken up with his boyfriend, so I thought I would keep him company for a little while. Jeff and Chris decided to go back to the Corner Pocket. People say that they are looking for love in all the wrong places. Those are the glass half empty people. I choose to think that they are finding sex in all the right places. After they left I decided to have my lovely friend escort me home for the evening.

Sunday came upon me like a tidal wave. I woke up, did housework, went to the gym, went into the office and did some paperwork and was still able to meet up with Jeff and Chris in order to go to the Lords of Leather Pool Party. It was a splendid soiree with food, flowing vodka drinks and a plethora of hirsute men. After spending some time there, we went back to the Quarter to meet up with the Amon-Ra bar crawl which was already in progress. The krewe has these monthly socials observing the members birthdays in that month. This month was Darwin Reed and Chris. Once again we went everywhere and back again, Good Friends, Rawhide, Lafitte's, Pub, Oz and 700 Club. But we ended up at the Pub for their Sunday Drink and Drown party.

Now this is so much fun, for $5 you can drink have all you can drink from 6 – 8pm. Now that is what I call a good deal in these tough economic times. We even stopped to briefly visit Blanche who was conducting Dingo at Oz which is always entertaining. After our Quarter jaunt we returned back to JohnPaul's in the Marigny, where we finalized our night of cocktailing.

What a great weekend for three ladies about town and I can think of no better way to honor our wonderful friend who is leaving us to pursue his career. Chris we will miss you terribly, good luck, much love and remember New Orleans is always here waiting for you. But stay tuned, because Jeff and I plan on visiting the little burg of Newport News very soon, which is just a hop, skip and jump away from Virginia Beach. I wonder if they will be ready for three ladies about town.

Tony's Tidbits of Gay Wisdom

Bars are going to the dogs, literally. There is an ever growing trend of bars that have "yappy hours" or "dog days, where people can bring their four legged friends with them to their favorite watering hole.

While I think that is cool to have those fun themed nights, I never quite understood the allure of bringing your pet to a bar. First off, it is usually noisy, smoky and does not actually lend itself to being a proper place to have Fido. Besides being an attention getter, I see no other reason to have your pet there. Sure, it gets you noticed by people who would otherwise pass you by, but have you ever heard of a dog park.

I get he is man's best friend, but why put him through the shame of seeing his master get plowed. I always like the guys who let their dog drink a draft beer for fun. They always say something like he loves the stuff or he thinks it is great. Really, douchebag, get a grip. He is thirsty and he cannot talk, not that it would do any good to speak to you, because ultimately he is not really your beloved pet, but an accessory to parade around like a purse. Except your accessory pees on the floor or worse yet leaves a little brown pickle which is another reason why you should not bring a dog to the bar.

Then there is the safety factor for the dog, people could step on the poor creature, he could get skittish and bite someone, or get into something dropped on the floor that could prove unhealthy if swallowed. And at any gay bar, the possibilities are endless. Do not get me wrong, I love dogs having three of my own, but the next time you feel the urge to bring your dog to the bar, ask him if he would like to go and if he answers yes; then by all means take him.
