trodding the boards ...from 20

Visage, looking classy with just a touch of trashiness thrown in, also was in charge of a mini-version of Snatch Game with panelists Bette Davis (Jinkx), Joan Rivers (Alaska), Judge Judy (Bianca, of course) and Laganja Estranja (Detox). Jokes about Robin Williams, Bobby Jindal and Visage herself ("She's so old, her vagina has separate entrances for blacks and whites.") tumbled forth, nothing was off-limits, and it was one of the funniest things I've ever seen.

Boasting higher production values than 2014's tour and an even stronger cast, this nearly 2½ hour RPDRBotS flew by like a dream (or a nightmare if you're a conservative Republican). Can't wait to see how 2016's tour will top this one.

Loretta Lynn at IP Casino Resort in Biloxi

At nearly 83, Loretta Lynn still sounds stellar, looks wonderful, and displays a feisty wit. Singing 15 of her hits in a 90-minute program that showcased other family members as well, Lynn offered a master lesson in the art of story-telling through song. As she went through Fist City, The Pill, One's on the Way, The Promise, Blue Kentucky Girl, and, of course, Coal Miner's Daughter, the only thing that could've made it better was if she had included some numbers from her Grammy Award-winner Van Lear Rose.

Twin daughters Peggy and Patsy, collectively known as "The Lynns," sang their best known number, 1998's Woman to Woman, and son Ernie, while effectively partnering with Mom for Louisiana Woman, Mississippi Man, displayed his usual ante-diluvian "wit" (though it was uniquely amusing, after he commented that one of the back-up singers could use some "manscaping," to hear Loretta's innocent reply, "I don't know what that means.").

But if true talent skipped one generation, it seems to be emerging in the next. Loretta's granddaughter Amy Rose, daughter of Patsy, sang an original song, Memaw's Guitar, that deftly wove some of Loretta's titles into the lyrics for a tribute that was charming and truly touching. While the First Lady of Country Music shows no signs of slowing down (she has bookings through October), it's nice to know there's a viable torchbearer to continue the Lynn legacy.

In addition to many other musical offerings, comedy will be soon be back on the boards at the IP Casino's Studio A with appearances by Wanda Sykes (May 29) and Bianca Del Rio's spiritual father, Don Rickles (June 27).

Ana Gasteyer/ Broadway@NOCCA

I'll confess I was only slightly familiar with Ana Gasteyer, mostly from her run on Saturday Night Live, prior to her appearance in Seth Rudetsky's ongoing Broadway@NOCCA series.

Now, after seeing her terrific show, I think a petition should be started to get this funny songstress the lead in a brand new Broadway musical.

Coming from a somewhat eccentric family that had a loom in their living room ("If that's not Quaker bona fides, I don't know what is," she cracked), Gasteyer has a natural comic energy that she put forth to outstanding effect in such songs as I'm Hip and A Proper Cup of Coffee.

Having met Rudetsky in NBC's gym when they both worked there in the '90s, they share a deep rapport that allows for casual give'n'take and a willingness on Gasteyer's part to open up about opera singing relatives from Transylvania and hilarious backstage craziness involving mechanical and wardrobe malfunctions.

She also has a bodacious set of pipes which she showed off with effortless excellence with songs from Wicked and Funny Girl, both shows in which she's had the lead.

Supremely versatile, cute, and game for anything, this audaciously talented performer delivered one of the best B@N evenings since the series started. Let's hope NOLA hasn't seen the last of her.

Although Christine Ebersole was to have been the final B@N outing this season, a new Broadway role understandably caused her to postpone. Though disappointed by that, I'm already looking forward to next season's line-up.
